

Comparative study of Pashto and Mundari Language

پښتو او منډاري

Dr. Ismail Gohar (Faculty Member, Department of Pashto, International Islamic University Islamabad)

Abstract:

Munda tribes are considered to be the most ancient and native inhabitants of India and original inheritors of Harappa and Moinjodaro civilization. Languages of Munda group are included in pre Dravidians languages. Researchers of the view that Munda tribes had not only pushed to dense forests of southern India by Dravidians but they had also inhabited in mountains area of North West. Area of North West is dwelling of Pashtuns. In this article the coherence between Pashto and Munda languages and similar features of both languages been analyzed.

Key words: India, Harappa, Moinjodaro, Dravidians languages, southern India.