

Internet effect on Pashto literature

Hamidullah Umarkhail (PhD Scholar, Department of Pashto, University of Kabul)

Abstract:

The Internet offers opportunities for those people who are banished from community, including a number of women, to take more part in reading and inventing the publications. The contact between authors is excellence on internet. Opportunity for free thinking is provided. In the definition of art, we study statement own self is art; then the third means that is censorship is no more here, the censorship and the barriers should not be preceded and the Internet has provided the opportunity to remove these obstacles and the ground is provided for Literary Realism. No attention to Pashto orthography will increase the difficulty of searching Pashto articles, proses, poems and books. Unnecessary criticism, copyright, lesser use of references and writing alias are the other defects of Internet. Internet has made a positive impact on the increase of the number of authors. In this articles, Internet effects on Pashto language and literature have been discussed. Some benefits and losses are presented in four section principles of writing art, poetry and verse, prose and criticism.

some new terms will be known in this article:

1: Digital Poet 2: Internet Literature 3: Global Village

Key words :Internet, Pashto Language, Digital Poet, Internet Literature, Global Village.