ABSTRACT

Brahui is one of the oldest languages of the world. Its fiction literature can be traced back to the folk tales of the olden times. The story is to be found in this oral tradition. The translations of fiction from the other languages into Brahui and those of Brahui fiction into the other languages started from 1956. Gul Bangulzai, Taj Raisani, Anwer Roman, Dr Abdur Rehman Brahui, Sosan Brahui, Nader Shahwani, Khadim lehri and many others translated fiction from foreign languages into Brahui.

The aim of this research article is to trace the origin and development of translations of fiction into Brahui language. The area has been virtually ignored by the research scholars and no scholar has yet noted that this area is by no means lesser than original fiction. Therefore, the researcher felt this important area and attempted to fill the research gap in this ongoing research study.

Key words: Fiction, Translation, Brahui, Foreign languages.
