Abstract

Verb also has as much importance in Brahui language as in other languages of the world. Verb is a word class, traditionally defined as a 'doing' or 'action' word, which ends with "ing" in Brahui language. It is used as singular like "Makhing" (To laugh), if the second syllable "ing" is omitted, then "makh" (laugh.) remains, which clearly is used as imperative. By adding suffix or infix with imperative, interrogative and negative forms can be made. Verb is the reason of enhancement of Brahui dictionary. Due to the importance and status of verb in Brahui language, its linguistic and research study has been conducted with reference to Brahui grammar.
