Abstract

Folktales are stories that grew out of the lives and imaginations of the people, or folk. They have always been children's favorite type of folk literature. Their popularity springs from their imaginative characters, their supernatural elements, Folktales employ certain characteristics or conventions common to virtually all tales. Brahui literature is rich in folktales. Mr. Afzal Mengal has played very important role in collecting of these folktales. In this article we will discuss the imaginative characters which have been presented in his folktales collection book "Gul E Khindan". This paper concluded with the kinds of folk characters, especially the animals, the reptiles and pets.
